Signs of 'Y' times — not for language credit

LAURI HOFMANN
Universe Staff Writer

Harvard and Princeton have accepted American Sign language (ASL) to fulfill foreign language requirements. BYU is not considering it a language of reading and writing skills.

"There are a lot of misconceptions about ASL," said Valerie Sturm, coordinator of BYU's ASL department. "First, whether it is a language and second, whether it fulfills the language requirements. I believe it fills them."

According to a BYU statement on general education requirements, there are three reasons ASL is not accepted.

First is a lack of support from a BYU department "with appropriate resources to ensure a quality program."

Currently, the ASL program is supported through the Evening Classes Department in cooperation with the Linguistics Department.

Ken Anderson, director of evening classes, said there are financial limitations to supporting the program. "Even though there are limits on what it can provide."

Part of the problem is the lack of a large library that supports ASL studies. "It would require a large amount of money to fund something like this," he said.

Anderson explained that since there is a limit to funding, BYU does not have the level of faculty expertise that other conventional languages have.

BYU credits are based on a high level of faculty expertise," he said, adding that although BYU has very good teachers, they are mostly undergraduate and graduate students.

The second reason ASL does not fulfill the requirement, according to the statement, is because ASL does not "provide students the insights into language structure and cultural context which we want for a GE program."

James R. Kearl, dean of honors and general education, said the purpose of the language requirement is to promote reading and writing skills in a foreign language.

"We're trying to get at a reading ability," Kearl said, "There's no textual history in sign language."

The last reason states there are "a number of theoretical questions still under dispute about the comparability of ASL to other natural languages."

Two areas cited that raise concerns are lack of a body of literature in ASL and questions about the autonomy of ASL culture.

"We want all students to broaden their horizons," said Kearl.

He added that although the previous dean had been approached about accepting ASL, he has not been asked to review the subject.

"It's never been proposed to me. I've never heard the arguments on both sides," he said.

"Research now proves that sign language is a language," said Gary W. Olsen, executive director of the National Association of the Deaf, based in Silver Spring, Md. "Sign Language is much more rigid according to rules than some other languages."

Acceptance of ASL as a language nationwide "is becoming a reality," said Olsen. He said there has been a greater awareness of the deaf person's right in society recently and a greater advocacy among the deaf community as to their rights and opportunities in society.

Highway delayed in Provo canyon

More studies yet to be completed

Environmental activists say they are pleased about a tentative settlement of a federal lawsuit that calls for a new environmental impact statement on a controversial road — widening project in Provo Canyon.

Last month, the impact statement was submitted to Dick Jones, attorney for the Federal Highway Administration, for consideration. He approved the statement, sending the case into federal court.

The highway project will now cease until the necessary studies have been completed.

The Utah Department of Transportation (UDOT) will have to draft a supplemental environmental impact study and an endangered species analysis on the project. This draft will be open to public comment.

"It is certainly a victory because we got what we asked for in court — to get the state to disclose to the public the environmental impacts of the project," said Constance Lundberg, a Provo attorney representing the Sierra Club and Citizens for a Safe Community.

But the Springville firm that was awarded the road contract last summer said the settlement will mean a year's delay and add at least $1 million to the $18 million cost of the project.

"We're still negotiating to get in there and do the work," said Richard C. Clyde, president of W.W. Clyde Construction Co. "It's been five months and we haven't done any work. Anytime you delay a project for a year, you run up costs."

The state project involves widening to four lanes a four-mile stretch of U.S. 189 from the Murdock Diversion Dam to U-92 at Wildwood. The estimated completion date was October 1988, but Clyde and state officials now say fall of 1989 is more likely.

Film ratings confusing

By MYLES G. MCKELL
Universe Staff Writer

Movie ratings are generally looked upon by many BYU students and even theater managers as inconsistent and unreliable.

"I don't rely on the rating system," said Paul Mason, manager of Provo's Mann Theatres. "The system needs some perfecting."

Mason feels that while some things in a movie can't be changed, other things could be eliminated.

According to church communications officials, general authorities of the Church have not released any formal statements concerning whether the movie rating system eliminates the LDS point of view.

"Some of your better movies could be rated PG if a couple of scenes were taken out," Mason said. "I think the producers put that kind of stuff in there to draw a better crowd. I think it's unnecessary."

But what about LDS Church standards?

"Sure, the church says don't go to R-rated movies. I've seen some pretty bad PG-13s," he said.

"Mason has a good point," said Robert Allen, former bishop of the BYU 59th Ward. "I saw 'Terms of Endearment', and it's the worst movie I've ever seen. It got a PG rating," he added.

"I don't think the system is reliable at all. It gives you an idea of what to expect but that's about it."

Most people feel that the system needs some improvement.

"It's inconsistent," said Dan Crandall, a freshman from Fairbanks, Alaska, majoring in Business Management. "When the PG-13 rating came out, it got worse."

"The movies carrying a PG-13 rating are usually worse than the R's," he said. "I don't pay much attention to the ratings."

"I still don't think it's much of a reflection of what the church standards are," said Alan Whipple, a graduate student from Pacheco, Calif. "Sure, there may be exceptions to the rule but on the whole, I think the ratings are inconsistent."

"The rating really doesn't give you a good idea of what's in the movie. It's better to listen to a friend or just find out from people who have seen the movie," he said.

Francis Sturlougson Eyer, author and first black missionary of the LDS Church, spoke at the JSB auditorium last night.

Society should realize all are God's children, LDS black author says

KIMBERLY HAWES
Universe Staff Writer

Society should learn not to judge people by the color of their skin because we are all God's children," said Mary Francis Sturlougson last night in the JSB auditorium during a speech in connection with Black Awareness Week at BYU.

After telling the audience to take a look at her, Eyer, the first black missionary for the LDS Church, said, "Do you truly believe that I am your sister? I hope you do, and can it in your heart."

"Color doesn't matter in the celestial kingdom," Eyer said. "People for whom we're all God's children simply because of the color of their skin."

Eyer said that God will not tolerate negative attitudes toward races of people in the celestial kingdom, and only the people of society show the pure love of Christ toward others and the Savior can enter kingdom.

The biggest racial problem Eyer had to deal with is the stereotype that black women have low morals.

"Black women are never put on a pedestal to begin with," she said. "If you get there it's because we had to work very hard."

Eyer, the author of "A Soul So Restless" and "He Restored My Soul," said she was introduced to him at a young age while growing up in the ghettos of Chattanooga, Tenn.

He remembered being called a "nigger" once when she was young, and has since set out to get an education to prove the names were wrong.

Despite the progress black people have made in society, racism and name-calling are still prevalent in the world, especially how blacks are portrayed in the media, said Eyer.

"While growing up I would try to find a black person on television to look up to, but they were hard to find," Eyer said.

When asked in a beauty pageant who she would be for 24 hours and why, she replied that it would be her mother because she knew how to love the whites.

"I didn't want anything to do with the white world while growing up," she said.

As she grew older she began to realize that blacks and whites are both striving to reach the same eternal goals, so she became more tolerant of the white race.

"Struggle is the primary law of life. Our salvation is in our own hands, no matter what color," she said.

Eyer was excited to see the black students at BYU sponsoring the Black Awareness Week, and encouraged them to keep moving forward as a group.

"It's an honor to actually see some color here," she said after commenting on the few blacks that were at BYU in 1977 when she attended school here. "You could count us on one finger."

Eyer said that BYU and Utah gave her the greatest education about learning why she was black.

"This color is a God-given one. I'm grateful that I'm a child of God, and that's what's most important."

She challenged students to look beyond skin color and find out what is inside the black person's heart.

"As the city of Enoch, I hope you will all become one in purpose, one in love, and one in returning home to our Father in Heaven," she said.

Media's bias kills cable act

By MIKE MONTROSE
News Editor

Lack of public support for a Supreme Court appeal of Utah's grounded cable decency act is due to inaccuracy and bias in the media, according to the Attorney General's Office.

"Most of the media has a liberal bias to anything that besmacks of censorship," said Paul Warner, associate deputy attorney general. Conflict of interest with some news organizations who have money tied up in cable television, is another motive for prejudice on the issue, he said.

A recent Dan Jones and Associates poll showed 57 percent of Utahns disfavoring an appeal. But paradoxically, 44 percent polled showed opposition to a bill before the Legislature that would repeal the never-enforced 1983 law, making further appeals impossible, the Associated Press reported.

Warner, not concerned by the poll, called it nonsensical and said it shows the public's confusion on the issue.

"The press has never truly explained what this bill does," Warner said. "If the public is not properly informed, it can't make a proper decision."

The Utah Cable Television Programming Decency Act was struck down as unconstitutional at the U.S.

District and 10th Circuit Court of Appeals levels. Attorney General David Wilkinson spent $250,000 in state funds to defend the law and the appeal to the Supreme Court is expected to cost at least another $75,000.

"The issue is economic, not moral," said Rep. Frank Pignatelli, D-Salt Lake. He, along with a group of other freshman democrats, sponsored the bill that if passed would erase the decency act from the books.

Pignatelli contends that the guidelines to regulate cable programming already exist and that the appeal to the Supreme Court would be a further waste of tax dollars. "The Supreme Court is not going to open up the heavens and set up a whole new set of guidelines," he said.

However, some supporters of the appeal feel the Supreme Court's ruling is critical to not only Utah, but other states as well.

"I think the attorney general has a moral obligation to appeal the law," said Norman Tarbox, director of BYU's broadcast communications program. "Other states are looking to the Utah case for further guidance. If we don't do it now we'll lose years."

Lynn Wardle, a BYU law professor with whom Wilkinson has obtained legal advice, said, "If Utah were to start over with a redraft, what would they have? They would lack clear guidance because the Supreme Court has never spoken and the District Court opinion is filled with inconsistencies and ambiguity.

"The issue is really an important one," said Wardle, who also called the media's coverage of the law inept and biased, with "journalists acting like cheerleaders." "If we give up, the issue will still have to be resolved."

A former state representative for Florida, Herb Morgan, who last year introduced legislation in his state regarding cable regulation, said a Supreme Court ruling on the Utah case would help clarify the issue.

"There is no standard of programming except what these monopolizing enterprises (cable companies) set for themselves," he said.

Morgan accused cable companies of airing cheaper sexually-oriented shows rather than more expensive quality programming that would compete with the broadcast networks. "Their interest is pure and simple," he said. "Profit."

In response to Morgan's charge, Brian McDougal, attorney for Community Television of Utah Inc. and other state cable operators, said, "That's absurd."

McDougal feels Utah's decency act is unconstitutional. "That's why we fought it and won twice." He hopes Pagnatelli's bill passes to make the case moot. "Anything to end this fiasco — we don't enjoy doing this."

Civil rights leader to speak at Black Awareness Week

By RONALD NORVIEL
Universe Staff Writer

Weather may not stay the courier from his appointed rounds, but airplanes are another matter.

Dr. Ralph Abernathy was prevented from appearing Feb. 15 due to snow in Atlanta but is scheduled to speak tonight at 7:00 in the deJong Concert Hall.

According to Gary Foster of AS-BYU Academics Office, Abernathy could not get to the airport but remained packed and ready from 5 a.m. until the last possible flight time had passed.

"A number of students expressed disappointment that Dr. Abernathy was not coming," said Foster. "We really wanted him to come to BYU for the Martin Luther King Jr. holiday."

Foster said he contacted Abernathy and found him cordial and disappointed in his inability to get out of Atlanta. Abernathy then agreed to speak this week. The civil rights leader will be rounding out Black Awareness Week with his speech titled "The Fight Continues."

Abernathy and Martin Luther King Jr. were known as the civil rights "twins" in the 1950s and 1960s — they marched together from Montgomery to Memphis, and were jailed 14 times in their quest for justice.

Abernathy organized and led civil rights events during his association with King and succeeded him (after King's assassination) as president of the Southern Leadership Conference.

Hostages may be swapped for Arabs

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Newspapers in London and Israel said Wednesday secret talks were going on for a major swap that would free foreign hostages in Lebanon in exchange for 400 Arab prisoners.

Lebanese Shiite leader Nabih Berri said there were no talks yet but indications were positive.

Berri, head of the mainstream Shiite movement Amal, made the original proposal on Saturday, setting off a frenzy of rumors, reports and speculation on the hostage crisis.

Berri, who is also Lebanon's justice minister, proposed that Israel free 400 Arab prisoners. In return, Amal would return a captured Israeli airman and a Moslem extremist organization would free the four kidnapped educators — three Americans and an Indian — it was threatening to kill.

On Wednesday, the Israeli newspaper Davar said Israel and the United States were negotiating a multinational deal to free all captives held in Lebanon by pro-Syrian and pro-Iranian groups, with Israel freeing 400 Arabs.

Davar, which has close ties to Israeli Foreign Minister Shimon Peres' Labor Party, said the deal involved the Swiss and Syrian governments and the International Committee of the Red Cross.

Reagan tells his side of Iran-arms story

WASHINGTON (AP) — For the second time in 17 days, President Reagan met in the Oval Office with members of the review board headed by former Sen. John Tower, R-Texas to answer questions about the Iran arms-sale affair.

Reagan appointed the panel Nov. 26 to investigate the activities of the National Security Council staff, including the secret sale of arms to Iran and diversion of profits to Contra rebels in Nicaragua.

At the request of the board, Reagan granted a one-week extension, until Feb. 26, for the panel to submit its final report.

Reporting on Reagan's 70-minute session with the board, presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said: "Today's meeting reviewed the National Security Council process and the development and execution of the Iran policy and the president's role. The president answered all of the board's questions."

Fitzwater said the board asked for more time in order to "comprehensively deal with all the information it has obtained."

Herbert Hetu, the board's spokesman, said the request for more time was not the result of the meeting with Reagan, the board's review of Reagan's notes or the hospitalization of former national security adviser Robert McFarlane, who took an overdose of the tranquilizer Valium on Monday.

Marital laws forced on live-in couples

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A Senate committee today unanimously approved a bill that would impose common law marriage on men and women who live together for two years or more.

The bill, sponsored by Sen. Stephen Rees, R-West Valley, is aimed at reducing welfare fraud by lowering the number of single mothers who receive welfare, but also get financial support from a live-in boyfriend. Legislative analysts estimate the measure could save $323,500 in state funds and $902,000 in federal money during the first year the law is in place.

The bill stipulates that for the law to be applied, a couple must "mutually assume marital rights, duties and obligations."

'Platoon' gets eight Oscar nominations

BEVERLY Hills, Calif. (AP) — "Platoon," a searing Vietnam drama that no studio would touch, and "A Room with a View," a period romance regarded as a long shot, scored eight nominations apiece Wednesday to lead the 59th annual Oscar race.

Woody Allen's "Hannah and Her Sisters" and two surprises, the outer space sequel "Aliens" and "The Mission," a church-vs.-state story of colonial Brazil, were runners-up with seven apiece.

The Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences' 4,000-plus voters made these nominations for best picture of 1986: "Children of a Lesser God," "Hannah and Her Sisters," "The Mission," "Platoon" and "A Room with a View," a gentle story of Britons at leisure in Florence, Italy and the English countryside.

Besides best picture, "Platoon" garnered nominations for director, editing, sound, cinematography and screenplay, and two nominations for best supporting actor.

It represented sweet vindication for writer-director Oliver Stone who spent 10 frustrating years trying to find backing for the film of his memories as an infantryman in Vietnam. The independently made film, distributed by Orion Pictures, is No. 1 at the box office this week.

Utah Power & Light pres. resigns

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Citing low profits, Utah Power & Light Co. announced Wednesday the resignation of James C. Taylor as president and chief executive officer of the privately held utility.

UP&L Board Chairman E. Allan Hunter said Taylor would be replaced by someone outside the state-regulated utility, which also serves customers in southern Idaho and western Wyoming.

"Seven years ago, our earnings were good. We were in a period of growth and we built plants on schedule," Hunter said. "Now the economy is bad and we have a surplus capacity and our earnings are down. That triggered a need for action," he said.

Taylor, 61, is a 34-year veteran of the company. He became its chief operating officer in 1984 and was named president and chief executive officer in 1985.

The company's board will immediately begin a nationwide search for a replacement for Taylor.

Manager to talk to city

RUTHANN WALL

Pine View parking problems may be driven out by new management actions.

"We really don't have a parking problem," said Dave Freeman, owner/manager of Pine View. "It is just crowded."

"The tenants deserve a place to park," Freeman said. "We have enough spaces for all those who have permits. The big problem is lack of space for visitors."

Visitor parking is located in the northwest corner of the lot. It's an inconvenience for someone to bring a car to the complex and then walk the way to the other side to say good night, Freeman said.

Pine View is located on University Avenue across the street from Viera Apartments. Tenants of Viera have parking available on University Avenue, but Pine View tenants are faced with a no-parking zone.

"If the (no-parking) zone was removed we would have about thirty-five spaces available for visitors to park," said Freeman.

According to Dave Graves, district traffic engineer of Utah State Department of Transportation, to remove the no-parking zone different procedures will have to be taken by Freeman, the city council and UDOT.

Freeman will need to present his appeal to the Provo City Council, said Graves. UDOT prefers to conform with the city's zoning recommendations. Therefore, Freeman must appear before the council.

"I will gladly scrape the red paint off the sidewalk myself to have the city council approve removal of the no-parking zone," Freeman said.

"I'll even take the state signs down and return them to the proper place."

The parking problem at Pine View has been brought to the council before, said Freeman. No valid reason was given for rejection of the appeal, according to Freeman.

However, according to LaNice Groesbeck of the Provo City Council, no record is shown of Pine View requesting removal of the zone.

"I've been on the council for about four-and-a-half years and have never heard anything about it," she said.

The city is open for the appeal and can only listen, then act on Freeman's request, Groesbeck said. "If Freeman will approach a council member personally, we could possibly agree to approach the state."

According to Graves, UDOT regulates the zoning of University Avenue.

"In the past, a no-parking zone was placed due to traffic control when the (Utah Technical College) was here," said Graves. "If Provo City would come to us, I don't see any problem in having the no-parking zone removed."

Familial change topic of lecture by 'Y' professor

Creating change in families is a topic of interest and will be the theme of a Family Living lecture Thursday at 7:30 p.m. in the ELWC Ballroom.

William G. Dyer, professor of organizational behavior, will speak on families and a book Dyer and Phillip R. Kunz, professor of sociology, wrote entitled, "Effective Mormon Families."

Dyer will discuss models of change that apply to families and illustrate them with examples from his research.

Families often want to change, but don't know how, according to Dyer.

"Changes are sometimes difficult when the family has not ever talked together or spent much time together," he said.

After interviewing more than 200 families for their book, Dyer and Kunz discovered that some families had made significant changes in their family patterns.

Set destroyed in bonfire; no one admits to error

KELLENE RICKS
Universe Staff Writer

Editor's note: The following story Feb. 10. Because key paragraphs inadvertently omitted, it is edited here for clarification.

More than school spirit went up in the air during the Homecoming festivities on campus last October, according to several reports.

Thousands of dollars worth of a set "Together Again for the First Time," a BYU production, was destroyed during the Homecoming bonfire, said one source.

Although several people confirmed the report, because of possible repercussions they refused to be identified. A graduate student and my oral coming up in April," said one.

"Together" was performed last semester on the Pardoe stage. The set for the show needed to be stored, according to Lee Walker, technical director for the theater department. The department rented half of Stor-Bay #3 on BYU Motion Picture lot. The other half of the storage was being rented by KBYU. When BYU's moving crew took the set to the storage bay, half of the set placed on KBYU-TV's side, exploded a source. "That's when it happened; KBYU-TV cleaned house and didn't recognize the stuff so they took it out," the source said.

"They (KBYU-TV) did it in ignorance," said Walker.

"It was removed in good faith," said Don Parker, scene shop foreman. "They didn't know it was ours."

When the people in charge of the Homecoming bonfire went looking for firewood they went to the motion picture studios where there is usually a great deal of scrap wood, the source reported. The people at the studios didn't recognize the set, so they gave permission for it to be used during the Homecoming bonfire, the source said.

The mix-up went unnoticed until January 19 when the set crew began to gather the set for rehearsals for regional competition.

Unofficial estimates of the cost to rebuild the set range from $3,000 to $5,000, but involved departments have not decided who will bear the cost of the reconstruction.

"Someone has to accept liability and pay for rebuilding the set," said Walker. "I don't know if it was burned, but I speculate that's what happened."

"I don't know the facts on it," said James Dain, manager of Building Maintenance. "I told Lee (Walker) when he was ready, we'd get together and have a meeting and decide what happened."

"I would assume no one in an administrative position will blame anyone for it," said Dallas Burnett, associate dean of the College of Fine Arts and Communications.

OPINION

Constitution is map to freedom

Say the word "constitution" around BYU, and one of two things usually happens: either the listener's eyes glaze over and slowly close, or the listener is suddenly transformed into a fire-breathing, flag-waving, chest-thumping patriot ready to grab his musket and head for Lexington.

But let's look beyond the stereotypes long enough to determine just what the Constitution of the United States is, and why it matters in our lives.

Eleven years ago, a nation of individuals gathered together long enough to celebrate the bicentennial of our country. Flags waved, bells rang, parades marched, and people all over the land felt proud deep within their hearts for the country they call home.

Last year, some of that fervor was kindled again at the 100th anniversary of the Statue of Liberty — a monument to the patriotic spirit that symbolizes this great land of ours. Millions watched as fireworks lit up the nighttime sky.

UNIVERSE OPINION

This year we celebrate another Bicentennial — the anniversary of the adoption of the U.S. Constitution. It's not quite the stuff that makes a good mini-series, nor the kind of anniversary that you'll find emblazoned on soft-drink cups at your local french fry emporium. What it is though, is a reminder of the principles that have allowed this country to get where it is today.

The founding fathers had several great things going for them when they came to the compromise that became the Constitution. First, they had a large collective faith in God; second, a faith in the ability of people to choose the right path if left to themselves; and third, a faith that government, left to its own devices, would consistently choose the worst possible and most oppressive way to achieve a goal.

These pioneers drew up a document that provided for the orderly exercise of government while placing roadblocks to prevent abuse of power. They formed an alliance that allowed the citizens of the United States to plan their own destiny, rather than having government do it for them.

When you drive down the streets of Washington D.C. and gaze at the White House, the Capitol, the Supreme Court as well as other monuments to patriotic fervor, you are looking at the result of the Constitution. When you drive down the streets of small-town America and see the mom-and-pop businesses that have the freedom to exist in a free society, you see the Constitution. When you drive past churches lining the roads of this great land, you are seeing the constitutional freedoms. All this because the Constitution allows and protects the rights of American citizens to be their best and do their best.

Freedom of the press, freedom of speech, freedom to assemble, freedom from oppression all translate into freedom to grow, freedom to speak your mind, freedom to pray, freedom to learn, freedom to dream.

The Constitution deserves to be read, studied, understood. It deserves to be observed and followed. It deserves a place in our lives, because the Constitution is America. It typifies and provides for our hopes and our dreams. It is a plan for the success of a nation — and the people within that nation.

Yes, the government of our country has problems. Yes, there are things we can do better. Yes, there are different roads we might be able to take. But this inspired document allows our nation to take those roads and dream those dreams. It is the document that helps shape the American Dream.

We owe this document more than just a yawn or a knee-jerk, wave-the-flag reaction. We owe it support, study, understanding.

Most of all, liberal or conservative notwithstanding, we owe it respect.

The above is the opinion of the Editorial Board of the Daily Universe, which consists of the editor, the editorial page editor, a student staff member, a teacher of opinion writing and the associate publisher; the opinions expressed are not necessarily those of Brigham Young University, its administration, its student body or sponsoring church. The Board meets Thursdays at 1 p.m. in 562 ELWC. The meeting is open to the public.

Child for sale...

Baby M battle still not settled

Should the mother get the baby?

A man contracts to pay a woman $10,000 for bearing a child artificially inseminated with his sperm. She agrees, signs a seemingly-legal contract, then balks when she holds the child in her arms nine months later. Can she keep the baby or is the contract binding?

The case is no longer an awaited fear, it is taking place this month in a New York federal court to decide the fate of Baby M, as the child has been named.

Though it will probably go all the way to the U.S. Supreme Court, this case can really be decided on a much smaller level — in a juvenile court.

As it stands now, however, most seem to agree. The contract was signed, she agreed to the transaction with a presumable sound mind, she should be held to that agreement.

The other side says the maternal instinct is far too great and the stress resulting from the loss of the baby should place enough doubt on the original terms to rule the contract invalid.

If the court decides for the mother on these grounds, it is saying the father has no rights to his natural child simply because the mother claims maternal instinct. We would have the introduction of a new concept, "Maternal privilege."

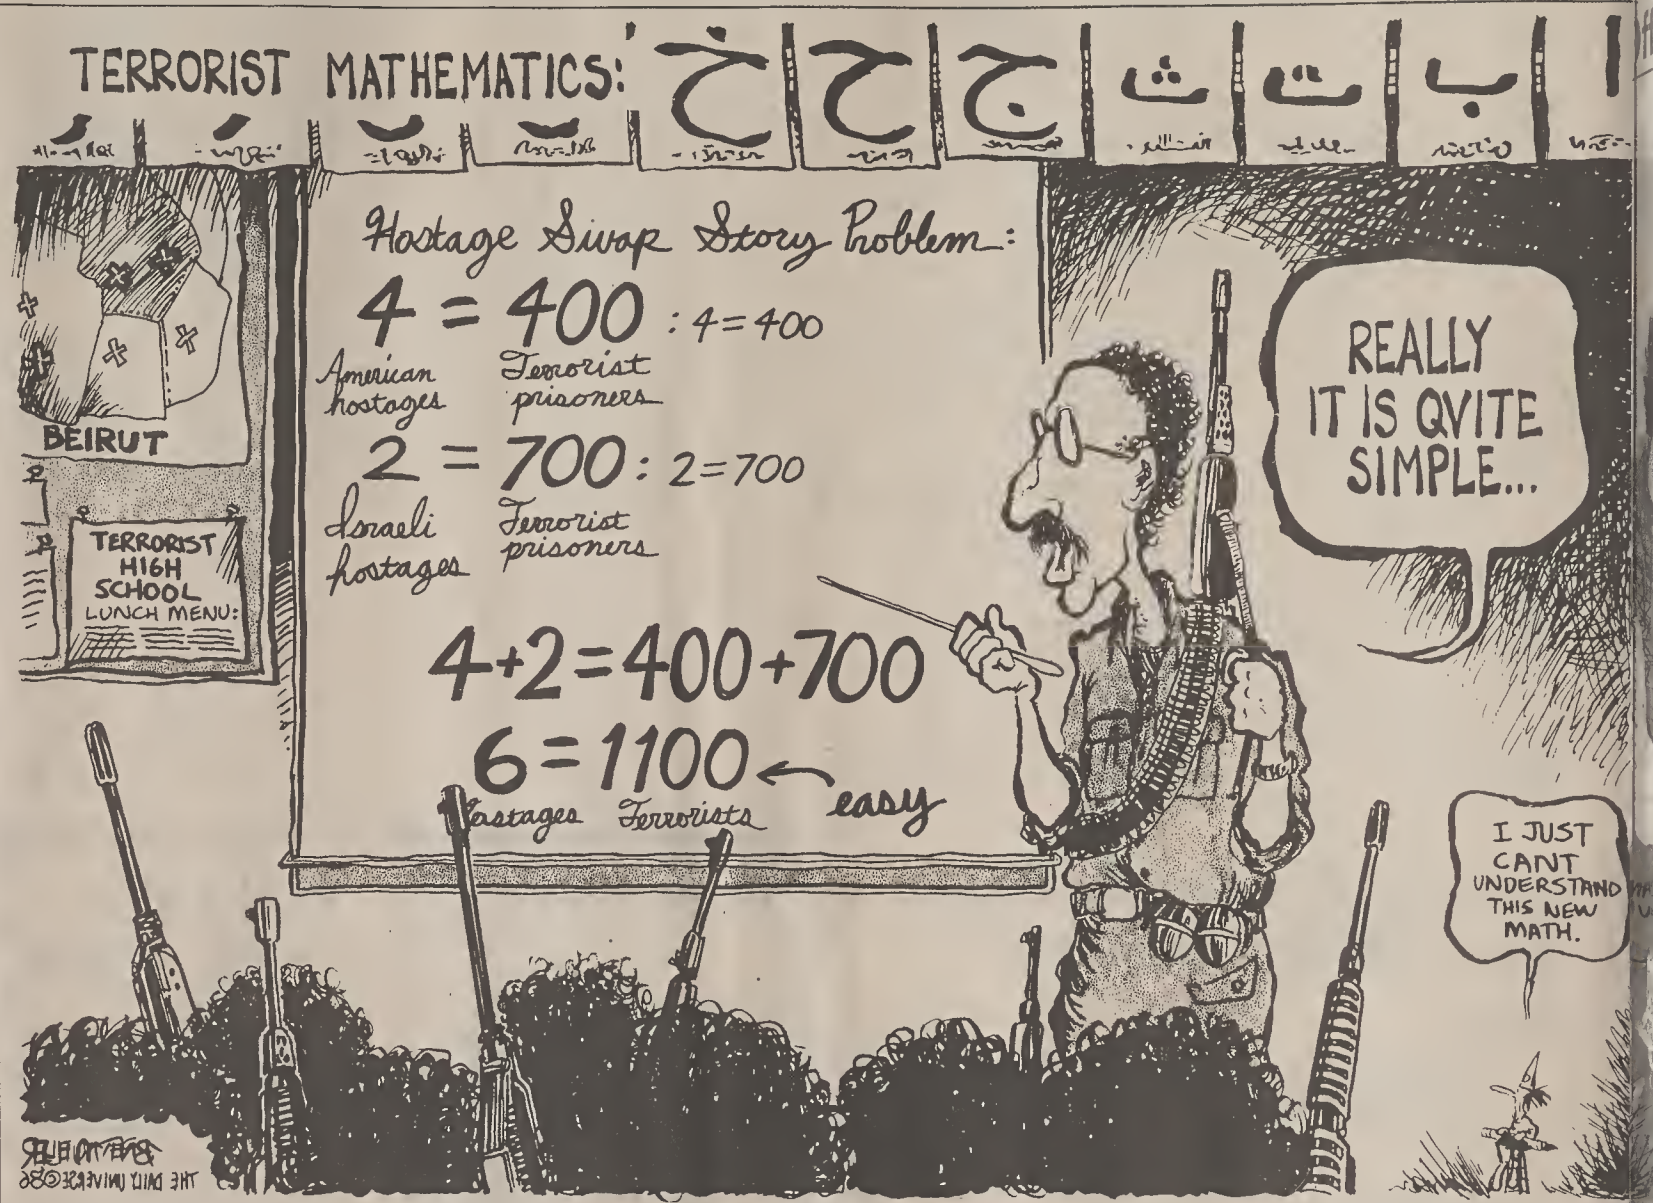

If we allow this case to be judged simply on the contractual terms, then the woman is clearly liable for the terms to which she consented and must give the baby up. In choosing that route, however, we are saying babies can be bought and sold. We will be re-opening the door to human bartering. "Babies for sale: two for one" will adorn shop marquees in malls around the country. Really.

Tell me though, in all of the business debates and cries of motherhood, is anyone thinking about the kid? Each side wants to raise their child and claims they have the right to do so. The implications of this problem resemble not so much that of a breached land or building contract, but more that of a divorce case.

We have here all the elements found in an everyday child custody suit. There is a broken contract, as in a divorce, and there is a battle for possession of the child. It should be treated in the same manner.

By sending this case to a civil custody court, the welfare of the infant would be the first priority.

And shouldn't it be? The guardian

Time can be a master manipulator

There is no time for time.

Has that pessimistic attitude ever befallen you? It has me at times.

For those who are not only students, but also busy raising their own family and working a job or two, that is an easy attitude to succumb to.

Time can be the master manipulator, the omni-operator of lives. It can readily instill upon our souls waves of frustration because we were unable to accomplish our necessary tasks in a given day.

This frustration is usually felt by those who have little respect for time.

It is those who let whatever happens happen, those who are lackadaisical about what they accomplish in their lives. These are people who fall under the category of idlers.

It is obvious that time is an entity demanding respect. This doesn't mean we bow down and worship our golden time pieces and say, "Oh mighty time keeper, dictate unto me what I am to do this very minute, and the next, and then after that..."

Having respect for time means knowing it will always be there and therefore needs to be reckoned with accordingly. In other words, taking steps to control it instead of letting it control you.

It is those that have a respect for time who are more likely to succeed in life. They succeed because they exercise control over time by planning how they will use it.

Those who plan out their lives daily and also set long-range goals are able to turn the ever-present entity of time into a positive thing. They are able to be productive, efficient individuals.

They are able to have a lot to show for their life and gain respectful positions in their area of work.

Don't let time run away with you.

Instead, grab time by its hand and allow your life to run alongside it. Let time be your companion and your adversary.

It all comes down to a matter of using our mortal existences to waste time during our life or to taste during our time.

I'd go on into more depth, but this I have time for.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Freshman Pals

Editor:

I'm relieved to hear that Off-Campus Housing decided to fortify our apartments against worldliness with the aid of resident assistants. Despite my signature which pledged allegiance to BYU's honor code, I still felt open to temptation. The now-required annual interviews with ecclesiastical leaders will provide even more protection. And now, with the addition of those forgotten pals of freshman, RAs, I finally feel completely free from the lures of immorality. For that matter, this decision should solve ugly sins such as stealing roommates' food and staying out too late.

I almost wish I wasn't graduating in April so we could request that an RA live right in our apartment next fall.

Adam Garfield
Arvada, Colo.

RAs are a waste

Editor:

I was disheartened to read of the proposed addition of RAs to off-campus housing. I live in accordance with the honor code, and have no reason to fear an RA so it is the underlying principle to which I object. Some administrators feel they can bolster sagging student integrity with the proliferation of bureaucracy and police structure. Such efforts are sadly misdirected, ineffective, unjustified and counterproductive. Violation of the honor code is symptomatic of deeper spiritual and moral vacuum originating in the home and in student wards. One cannot impose from without what can only come from within; moral integrity is not inculcated by constant supervision. Correct principles should be taught by parents, peers, bishops, priesthood quorums and Relief Societies to cultivate good student citizens; only these organization can and should make a difference.

If there is to be a leader to whom students will turn for guidance and example, then let it be the elders quorum president, or the Relief Society president. Anyone less than these will be ineffective objects of derision and at worst will undermine the wards sense of mission. University standards are not violated out of ignorance so the "teacher role" of RAs is redundant. If landlords needed their work loads alleviated, the free enterprise system would have seen to it long ago. The dorms are available and eager to serve parents who want their children supervised by RAs. Finally, RAs would become a demeaning bureaucratic burden upon the majority of students who already observe church standards, while having little effect on those who choose not to comply with them.

I share the university goal of a religious-academic community free of hypocrisy, but RAs are not the answer. If our quorums can't or won't meet the moral challenges of life, then perhaps we are sufficiently rotten and the whole idea of a church university should be reconsidered.

Mistake

Editor:

I write in response to the administration's move to place RAs in off campus housing starting next Fall. I view this move as a mistake and have several objections to the way it is presented in the article. First, it is presented partly under the guise that the present managers are over-worked and that the RAs will help alleviate that problem. While this may sound noble, the manager's are hired and paid by private owners and therefore, able to work out the problems that may arise. Second, it is stated that parents expect BYU approved housing to have supervision.

I may be an exception but my parents have expressed no concern in my being my own keeper. In fact, I don't think that they would have let me leave home had they had any serious qualms. This may be a silly argument though because my parents trust me.

Third, the whole plan is misdirected because it attacks a problem at its manifestations but not at its causes. It may be possible to cut down on honor code violations or at least make them less overt with this new plan.

This will not change the attitude behind the problem. This type of enforcement will not change a heart but it may encourage rebellion because it is perceived as a lack of trust hitting us right where we live (pun intended).

The BYU administration should show more confidence and try to do things that will improve our moral character and spirituality. It should not grope for a greater degree of compliance through compulsion. Honor code problems will persist until we improve ourselves, not our methods of enforcement.

Who'll pay?

Editor:

In response to the article printed Feb. 5, "September to bring RAs to off-campus housing," I would first like to say that I agree with the policy of approving the same for student use. This approval is an advantage to the student as it helps to maintain the quality of living conditions that students are entitled to. From the standpoint of the owners/managers, of which I am one, I can also see how a similar policy regarding RAs would be advantageous. My question to Mr. Pace and/or the off-campus housing office is, who are they to REQUIRE us to comply with the latter?

As the housing department aware, through the on-campus dorms, the MTC, etc., certain allowances must be made to those persons acting as RAs by way of counted or even free rent, or by some other means. As owners/managers we are entitled to do business and earn money the same as any other company, which we are not as able to do by being required to conform to policy set forth by a neutral party. Putting it bluntly, off-campus housing has no more authority to require RAs in our apartments, than we do tell USX to reopen Geneva. Yet response will be, "Without RAs will not approve you." This denigration can be compared to the monopolistic powers, which are legal even for private universities.

If this is to be the final decision the matter, may I make two suggestions to Mr. Pace and his associates. First, your office can reimburse the cost of hiring and employing RAs or better yet, why not buy all apartments, houses, and condos the area, make one big dorm, then you can exercise any dominion you want to.

On behalf of the students; who happened to the statement by Jos Smith, "We teach them correct principles and let them govern themselves?"

Square speeds

Editor:

I would like to express the feelings of many students including myself about BYU physical education clothing. We feel that if BYU has dress standard why does it not true for the P.E. department? don't mean that pants should be very physical activities, we just want that the clothing issued should be changed. The shorts that are required are indecent and ought to be dispensed of. The swimwear that is required is ridiculously outdated. The suits are like wearing a square speedo. We understand and agree with the rule of wearing issue clothing but feel that BYU should move out of the Dark Ages and into the modern world.

The Oklahoma Secretary of Education-designate said drastic increases, including an 88.8 percent increase in tuition for OU students, are proposed in Gov. Bellmon's recently released budget.

Figures used when details of the budget were leaked last week had set tuition increases at 15 percent. But the official figures range from 11.1 percent at Rogers State College to 201.4 percent at Murray State College.

Secretary of Education Smith Holt said in order to raise the $60 million for higher education requested in Bellmon's budget, the governor is proposing an 88.8 percent fee increase for OU.

"With the proposal, each person's tuition at OU will nearly double," he said.

Editor:

The New York Times describes the OU as "notoriously easy." The Yale Daily News evaluates OU by stating, "The University of Oklahoma may be the best college in Oklahoma, which reveals more about Oklahoma than about OU." It is evident that OU is a mediocre university fed by a mediocre secondary school system. If Oklahoma is ever to escape its entrenched inferiority, it must make a difficult commitment to excellence. It must become competitive. I submit it is time to double standards, not tuition.

I was shocked and disgusted to see an ad on the drag today showing the infant Jesus on a charbroiler with Joseph and Mary standing by, plates and forks in hand. The ad was for the bands Poison 13 and Agony Column appearing at the Texas Tavern.

To depict any child being roasted alive is evil and sick. I urge anyone with a shred of decency to pull the ads down, boycott these bands and let the union know how you feel. I hope God has mercy on the "artist" who drew this; I certainly wouldn't.

The University Senate voted down a motion to make no-pass grades count as F's when calculating grade point averages.

If passed, the motion would have counted no-pass grades as F's on a student's transcript after the student had accumulated more than 15 credit hours of no-pass credit.

Currently, a grade of a C-minus or higher earns a "pass" grade, while a D or below is given a "no-pass" grade.

An estimated 30 percent of UCSB's student population wore jeans on Gay and Lesbian Jeans Day, up from 15 percent last year.

According to Gay and Lesbian Student Union President Jayme Frank, statistics taken prior to and after the event showed that 45 percent of the student population wear jeans on an average school day. Statistics take "mixed weather conditions" into account, he said.

Public response to Jeans Day was not as critical as last year. The GLSU received six letters calling Jeans Day "a really stupid idea," but this number is small compared to last year when students wrote "tons" of letters to the Daily Nexus, Frank said.

Many students claim that counting the number of students wearing jeans is an inaccurate method for measuring campus response to gay and lesbian issues.

Offices give responsibility

Elderly form own government

Carol Jewkes explains the town government program to senior citizens at the Seville Retirement Home in Orem.

By TERESA GRAY
Universe Staff Writer

Retirement home residents can be mayor, publish a newspaper or star in a drama production under a BYU official's plan.

Carol Jewkes, program administrator at the BYU Gerontology Resource Center, is the author of "Programming for Successful Senescence," a recreation manual for those who work with the elderly. The manual outlines a program for nursing homes and retirement centers in which a "town government" is established and the elderly have specific responsibilities in the government.

"It's an outline of how to help elderly people rejuvenate their lives," said Jewkes.

Holiday Retirement Corporation, a firm that owns 32 retirement centers across the United States, has shown an interest in the program. The corporation plans to have her instruct the recreation managers of various centers across the country, she said.

The town government program allows the elderly to have responsibilities and feel needed, said Jewkes. A mayor and several councilmembers are elected to head committees such as physical fitness, education, hospitality, and publicity.

"We create a need for them," she said. "Whatever the elderly have a talent in, we give them a responsibility."

Jewkes developed the program while working for Golden Living Centers, which is now Southmark Autumnwest. While there she found that giving the elderly specific responsibilities at the center gave them the chance to reach out and help each other.

"You just can't imagine the change that takes place," said Jewkes. "The elderly lose so much when they get old. Some lose their license or even their spouses. It's wonderful to see them gain back their self-respect."

The town government program is in operation at Cove Point Retirement Community in Provo, said Jewkes. Seville Retirement Residence in Orem and Harrison Regent Retirement Home in Ogden will soon be implementing the program.

Signing skills denied

State legislatures in Texas and have both passed resolutions identify sign language as a foreign language. Their state universities, however, have not yet adopted the idea of accepting it to fill the foreign language requirements.

Harvard, Princeton, Northeastern University in Boston and the University of Minnesota, among others, recently accepted ASL in lieu of foreign language.

The University of Minnesota the program was adopted after a deaf student petitioned the university to accept ASL ability as a second language.

Other universities such as Stanford considering the issue, but have not yet made a decision.

"We are trying to meet some of the students' needs," said Marya Schuch-Dwyer, coordinator of the ASL Language Department at Stanford University.

"We're trying to resolve the matter. We are actually in the process of deciding whether it would fulfill the requirement. We are in a peculiar position."

Schuch-Dwyer said it would probably take at least a year before the issue is resolved.

"I feel the program at BYU should be evaluated. I don't think we should keep it under the carpet because of misunderstandings between the deaf and the hearing communities," said Sturms.

At BYU, students may choose to take a foreign language or take a math route for the GE requirement.

"The purpose of a category three (foreign language or math) requirement is to broaden horizons, then why not give them in a useful direction?" said Sturms.

There is a great need for skilled interpreters in Utah, but it is very difficult for beginning ASL students to stick with the program when it does not fulfill the language requirements, said Sturms.

"We get a lot of people who come in at 101 and take enough to be able to survive, but they rarely continue to such a level to be able to be interpreters or counselors," she said.

The reason many students do not stick with the program is because it takes 23 credit hours to be considered skilled, said Sturms, and students cannot fit it into their schedules along with another language or the math requirement.

"Just because people don't write their language, doesn't mean it isn't a language. What's the need for learning Japanese if I'm never going to use it? I know I'll use sign language."

—Lori Johnson
101 student

"I don't feel I should have to take another language," said Leslie Sutter, a sophomore from Arcadia, Calif., majoring in psychology, and an ASL 101 student. "I might transfer, before I graduate, to a college that accepts ASL."

"Just because people don't write their language, doesn't mean it isn't a language," said Lori Johnson, a freshman from Boise, Idaho, majoring in art education, and also a 101 student. "What's the need for learning Japanese if I'm never going to use it? I know I'll use sign language."

"Many students, deaf and hearing, are discouraged from attending BYU because it does not accept ASL as a language requirement," said Sturms.

"The deaf students are forced to go the math direction," she said, explaining that deaf students cannot fill a language requirement that requires conversation ability.

Handicapped students at BYU are not given special treatment, although there are supportive services.

"Most deaf students are discouraged from attending BYU because sign language is not accepted," said Sturms.

"Students do have to make a choice," said Anderson. "If they don't feel the alternatives are reasonable, they should probably consider a different institution."

Kearl said deaf students can take the math route, or learn Latin, Greek or Biblical Hebrew, which do not require the conversation ability to fill the requirement.

Anderson said BYU is the only major institution in Utah to offer an ASL program.

"It's a great bonus and a blessing that this institution offers it. If people criticize BYU for doing something rather than nothing, then they don't have a clear picture."

The BYU Dancers' Company will demonstrate their diversity in "Bits & Pieces," the 1987 Dance in Concert. The concert will open this evening at 7:30 p.m. in the Dance Theater, 185 RB. Eight modern dance pieces choreographed by BYU faculty members will be performed.

Dancers to offer 'Bits & Pieces'

By MICHAEL JENSEN
Universe Staff Writer

BYU Dancers' Company will present "Bits & Pieces" as its 1987 Dance in Concert Thursday-Saturday at 7:30 p.m. in the Dance Theater, 185 RB.

Eight modern dance pieces choreographed by BYU faculty members promises to be a "high class buffet" said Pat Debenham, director of Dancers' Company.

"There will be some entrees, some meaty pieces, some desserts, and even some mousse," said Debenham.

Some of the featured dances include, "Do Not Remove Under Penalty of Law," a dance choreographed by Debenham, about the innocence and freedom of children jumping on mattresses after their parents leave, said Debenham.

Also choreographed by Debenham, is "Leapin' Lincan," a dance using colorful sheets as props that resembles a "Bounce commercial" or a January white sale in February.

"Gothic Tracery," which reflects the shape and delicacy of Gothic architecture will also be featured.

The piece, created by Caroline Prohowsky, a new faculty member, features three female dancers who never let go of each others' hands as they create interlacing Gothic patterns.

"Kan Kroon" a tongue-in-cheek look at romance and relationships, illustrates how people try to deal with relationships instead of trying to enjoy them. Tickets are available at the Music Ticket Office, HFAC or at the door.

Streep heads list of 'worst dressed'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actress Meryl Streep, game show hostess Vanna White and Sarah, Duchess of York, topped the 27th annual list of worst-dressed women by dress designer and fashion arbitrator Mr. Blackwell.

"The problem is that most of the women in the world could have made the list," Blackwell said at a news conference in the parlor of his home. "The whole trouble is, we only had room for 10."

Actually there were 11 on this year's list, with actresses Sharon Gless and Tyne Daly, stars of the "Cagney and Lacey" television show, tying for fifth place. Also on the list were Barbra Streisand, Kathleen Turner, Cher, Whoopi Goldberg, and Jean Kasem, wife of radio announcer Casey Kasem.

Miss Streep, who sometimes makes her own clothes, was first on the list. "She looks like a gypsy abandoned by a caravan" said the acerbic designer, who prefers to be known by his professional name.

Second was Vanna White, the prize presenter on the popular "Wheel of Fortune" game show.

Utah Symphony soloist to display horn's diversity

BYU's Performing Arts Series will feature Jeffrey Kirschen, a horn soloist with the Utah Symphony, in a recital Thursday night. "With this concert, I'm trying to show what the solo horn can do," said Kirschen.

According to Kirschen, two of the eight pieces he is performing are written specifically for the solo horn, and others have been transcribed. "The horn is an uncommon solo instrument, at least in this area," he said.

Some of the pieces will feature Kirschen alone, while others will be accompanied by the piano. "By mixing the horn with accompaniment, I'm able to show the diversity of the solo horn," said Kirschen.

The performance will begin with Two Fanfares, op. 78 by Egon Wellesz. Other selections include, Beethoven's Sonata in F Major, op. 17, "I Attempt from Love's Sickness to Fly" by Henry Purcell and Nocturno, no. 7 by Franz Strauss.

Kirschen joined the Utah Symphony in 1980, and is a member of the symphony's Brass Quintet. In 1983, Kirschen won the American Horn Competition in Atlanta, Ga., and has performed as solo horn in the Pacific Northwest Wagner Festival.

The 7:30 p.m. performance will be in the Madsen Recital Hall. Tickets are available through the Music Ticket Office, HFAC, 378-7444.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Howard the Hollywood duck that laid a $45 million egg joined rock singer Prince in the spotlight for the Razzie nominations, an Oscar spoof that celebrates Hollywood fantasies that fizzle.

The big loser was "Under the Cherry Moon," the self-consuming black-and-white musical fiasco by rock star Prince. The film was nominated eight times, including worst picture, actor, director, song and screenplay.

Two-time worst actor winner Sylvester Stallone and his wife, Brigitte Nielsen, were nominated for their performances in "Cobra," the cop fable about a machine gun-toting detective.

"Shanghai Surprise," featuring Sean Penn and Madonna, received six nominations, including worst picture and worst performance by its stars.

BYU signs top prepsters

by DAVID BUXTON
Sports Editor
and Associated Press

BYU, as expected, laid claim to Texas high school standout quarterback Ty Detmer Wednesday as the national letter of intent sweepstakes began.

Detmer, with television cameras and reporters as witnesses, signed his letter at San Antonio's Southwest High School.

"I'm really happy about this," he said. "I've spent a long time waiting. I'm finally here."

There was little suspense about where Detmer would spend his collegiate career. In fact, Detmer had if NCAA rules hadn't stood in the way, he could have signed with BYU a long time ago.

Despite recruitment efforts by UCLA and Miami, Detmer's commitment to the Cougars did not waver, said his father-coach, Sonny Detmer.

"He's been committed for so long, I think people expected him to back out," he said. "He never ended to back out. Unless you know Ty, you don't think an 18-year-old kid can stick with a commitment. BYU is where his heart is."

Detmer, who threw for 79 touchdowns and 8,005 yards in high school, was the 1985 Texas Player of the Year. His passing yardage, completions and passing attempts set records for high school quarterbacks.

"He's an outstanding player," said BYU assistant coach Dick Felt. "I asked one of the Texas Tech coaches about him earlier this year and he said, 'All I know is he throws it, they catch it, they score a touchdown.'"

Detmer, 6-foot, was not the only hot Texas recruit to sign with BYU. Brian Mitchell, a 5-foot-10, 170-pound defensive back from Waco, also signed with the Cougars.

So did David Henderson, a 6-2, 175-pound defensive back from Longview who was recruited by Texas, Stanford, Iowa and Texas Tech. Henderson was considered one of the nation's top 100 recruits for 1987.

The Cougars also had a successful day in signing in-state recruits. They signed the top three linemen in Eli Herring, a 6-foot-6, 280-pound all-state selection from Springville; Doug Stone, a 6-foot-4, 240-pound all-state pick from Timpview; and Greg Pitts, another 6-foot-4, 240-pound all-stater from Timpview.

Herring was also the AAA state heavyweight wrestling champion in Utah and is the biggest of this fall's recruits. He was a five-sport letterman in Springville and was also recruited by Stanford and Washington of the PAC 10.

BYU garnered letters of intent from Mike Empey, a 6-foot-6, 265-pound all-state linemen from Pocatello, Idaho, and Ron Simmons, a 6-foot-3, 240-pound linemen from Mission Hills, Calif.

The Cougars signed two running backs: Peter Tuipulotu, a 6-foot-1, 180-pounder from San Mateo, Calif., who is the brother of current Cougar running back Tommy, and Scott Charlton, a 190-pound 6-footer and all-state pick from Idaho Falls' Bonneville High, also signed with BYU.

BYU announced the signing of Kyle Roberts, a 6-foot-2, 180-pound defensive back from Mountain View, and Ted Dawson, a 6-foot-2, 225-pound linebacker from LaCanada, Calif.

BYU also heralded the signing of five junior college transfers, four of them from Ricks College. Those signees are:

— Kirk Davis, a 6-foot-1, 195-pound defensive back from San Jose, Calif., who earned second-team junior college All-America honors at Ricks last season. He intercepted a school-record 15 passes during his career at Ricks.

— Greg Hunter, a 6-foot-5, 265-pound offensive linemen from Brigham City and Ricks. He was a two-time all-conference selection and first-team JC All-America for Ricks.

— Travis McBeth, a 6-foot-3, 215-pound tight end from Carefree, Ariz., who led Ricks in receiving last season with 45 catches.

— Chad Robinson, a 6-foot-4, 218-pound linebacker from Highland and Ricks. He was a first-team all-conference selection last season. He is also the only sophomore among those recruited from the junior college ranks and redshirted one year while at Ricks.

— Phil Nauahi, a 6-foot-5, 260-pound all-league offensive linemen from LaHabra, Calif., and Fullerton JC.

Smith named All-American

Cougar forward Michael Smith was named Wednesday the District VIII GTE Academic All-America team. Smith, a 6-10 sophomore from Hacienda Heights, Calif., is a pre-med major and sports a 3.5 GPA. He leads CU's basketball team in scoring with more than 18 points per game, and has scored 34 points on three different occasions this year.

Smith is also among the nation's leaders in free throw shooting with a 91 percent average.

Joining Smith on the District VIII team is another sophomore from Utah, 6-3 guard Luka Pavicevic from the University of Utah. Pavicevic is from Titograd, Yugoslavia, and has a 3.66 GPA in mathematics.

Other players in the district who were named to the Academic All-America team included Novian Whitsitt of Stanford, Keith Balderston of Oregon and David Butler of Cal-Berkeley. They were selected by the College Sports Information Directors of America.

Smith and the others will now advance to the national ballot for Academic All-America honors.

Other Cougars nominated to the team included forward Brent Stephenson and center Tom Gneiting.

Spikers Virtanen, Salmi again selected All-American; add to their list of collegiate accomplishments at BYU

by LISA WILLARDSON
Universe Sports Writer

Sari Virtanen and Mariliisa Maikki, members of the BYU women's volleyball team have not only received first team All-America honors from CVCA/Russell but this month's issue of Volleyball Monthly named these two players have been named to the Asics Tiger/Volleyball Monthly All-America First team as well.

"I thought Maikki was going to get (an award) or at least one of us, and then both of us did. It was quite a surprise," said Virtanen.

"I don't really try to get anything (honors, awards), it just comes. I'm sure I speak for Sari as well that we couldn't have done it without the whole team," commented Salmi.

Virtanen, the 6-0 senior outside hitter from Sivikkala, Finland, had two outstanding years with the Cougars. She was chosen HCAC Offensive Player of the Year, GTE/CoSIDA District VII Academic All-America, and NCAA Northwest Region Player of the Year.

Salmi, the 5-10 junior setter from Kurikka, Finland, has also played exceptionally well, she was also named HCAC Player of the Year and CVCA/Reebok Player of the Year.

Both of these players had received numerous other awards throughout the 1986 season as well.

Virtanen has used up her collegiate eligibility. Salmi however, will be returning back next season as setter for the Cougars.

Salmi will be competing on the Finnish National Team and the Finnish Student Games this summer.

"Sari has been our leading hitter on the team and it will be difficult to replace her," said BYU volleyball Coach Elaine Michaelis.

"As for Maikki (Salmi), she is the best setter in the country. We will have five stars and her back next year making it very exciting," added Michaelis.
